Search Results

The online directory of New South Wales solicitors who hold a current practising certificate as at 24 March 2017.

The type of practising certificate held by the solicitor does not necessarily reflect the position the solicitor occupies at the Principal Place of Practice or other associated Practice. Information regarding the status of a solicitor within a law practice should be obtained directly from the practice.

The directory also includes details of specialists accredited in New South Wales (who may be from other Australian states and territories as well as New South Wales), and may include interstate legal practitioners who have an office in New South Wales.

Mediators

We advise that the practitioners listed are members of the Law Society of New South Wales that have indicated that they are also mediators. We do not collect information regarding their qualifications. The Law Society of New South Wales therefore advises you to check the mediator's qualifications and suitability for your matter prior to engaging them. We recommend that you approach more than one mediator before making a decision.
